DETAILED ACTION

Response to Amendment

1. Applicant's amendments and accompanying remarks filed 11/9/01 have been entered and carefully considered. Applicant's amendments are not found to patentably distinguish the claims over the prior art and Applicant's arguments are not found persuasive of patentability for reasons set forth herein below.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

1. The text of those sections of Title 35, U.S. Code not included in this action can be found in a prior Office action.
2. Claims 1-2, 5, 11-16, 18-20, 29-31, 34, and 37-39 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Honeycutt (5207873), as previously set forth.

Applicant has added a bursting strength value to independent claim 34. Applicant has added a new independent claim reciting substantially the same limitations as claim 34, but with an added tensile strength property. It is the examiners position that if these properties are not inherent in the web of Honeycutt then it would have been obvious to the skilled artisan to impart these strength properties to Honeycutt's web. Honeycutt's web, as with applicant's claimed web, does not have any additional binding means other than hydroentagling. Therefore, strength is added to the web by increasing entanglement imparted through the hydroentagling. It would have been obvious to the skilled artisan to entangle Honeycutt's web to have applicant's claimed strength properties. Such a modification would have been motivated by the desire to increase the strength of the web and render it suitable for uses where it would be subjected to increased stress. The examiner also notes that applicant's web is used for the same purposes as the web of Honeycutt.

Applicant has not set forth any further arguments or stated why the web of Honeycutt would not inherently have the instantly claimed strength properties.

3. Claims 1-2, 4-7, 9-12, 14-19, 29-31, 34, and 37-39 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Yamamura et al (5882780), as previously set forth.

It is the examiners position that if the newly added strength properties are not inherent in the web of Yamamura then it would have been obvious to the skilled artisan to impart these strength properties to Yamamura's web. Yamamura's web, as with applicant's claimed web, does not have any additional binding means other than hydroentagling. Therefore, strength is added to the web by increasing entanglement imparted through the hydroentagling. It would have been obvious to the skilled artisan to entangle Yamamura's web to have applicant's claimed strength properties. Such a modification would have been motivated by the desire to increase the strength of the web and render it suitable for uses where it would be subjected to increased stress. The examiner also notes that applicant's web is used for the same purposes as the web of Yamamura.

Applicant has not set forth any further arguments or stated why the web of Yamamura would not inherently have the instantly claimed strength properties.

Art Unit: 1771

4. Claims 3, 8, and 21-23, 26-33 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over both Honeycutt (5207837) and Yamamura (5882780) in view of Chen et al (5990377), as set forth in the last two actions and untraversed by applicant.
